

Monthly Wage Information

If your earnings are close to the substantial gainful activity level (see 20 C.F.R. § 404.1574), documentation from your employer may be essential to show the Social Security disability examiner that you are not actually performing substantial gainful activity. Your W-2 form may work fine for last year, especially if there is no question concerning the dates you worked. If there is a question about the dates worked last year, you may need information from your employer.

If you are working in the current year and a recent paystub does not show all necessary information, you may need earnings information from the employer. This form will gather it.

Note that this form asks about vacation and sick pay. According to POMS DI 10505.010 C, only earnings paid as a result of actual work activity count. Thus, sick pay and vacation pay do not count for determining eligibility for Social Security disability benefits, although according to POMS DI 10505.010 D, bonuses do count.

To: _____

Re: _____

SSN: _____

Please show monthly gross income and income from vacation or sick pay for the months and years indicated:

	Year _____		Year _____
Month	Gross Income	Vacation/ sick pay	Gross Income	Vacation/ sick pay
January
February
March
April
May
June

July
August
September
October
November
December

Date: _____

Signature: _____

Title: _____

Print Name: _____